Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 03 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
A cold day with some wintry showers.

Today:
A dry start with some sunny breaks for the western parts of the region. Scattered showers, some of which will be wintry, across the east will spread westwards at times. Rather cold, turning breezy. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Tonight:
Mostly dry and cloudy through the evening across the region. Further showers to develop in the east overnight with the risk of patchy frost and ice. Remains breezy and cold. Minimum temperature -3 deg C (27 deg F).

Monday:
Remaining dry and often cloudy on Monday with some scattered showers, perhaps wintry in the east clearing during the evening. Clear breaks for some areas overnight. Remains cold and breezy. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Clouds, wintry showers and overnight frost for Tuesday especially for the eastern areas. Drier with bright spells on Wednesday. Further rain to arrive on Thursday. Remaining cold with light winds.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.